

DO NOT URGE THEM

There is No Sense in the "Business" Craze.

EACH GIRL HER OWN GUIDE

Business Is Too Fractional to Be Used as a Play Toy-The Party Between Men and Women.

There is no sense in this thing of urging girls or women to go into business, and the sooner that fact is believed the better it will be for the happiness of thousands of young women who are now being misled to disappointment. The girl who most goes to men makes no argument; she will find her place without the help of agitators, whose chief capacity seems to be the turning of drowsy phrases.

And for the girl who is led by such Pins to Be Saved.

Good authorities offer a variety of opinions as to who should be first served at a dinner. Many claim that it is correct form to serve the hostess first. In many elegant families this is always observed for a very excellent reason. If the dish be one a little out of the usual order guests prefer to see the method of the hostess in partaking of it before venturing themselves. The knife, fork and spoon tyranny is a relentless one, and in these days stamps social rank without mercy. Other authorities state that correct form requires the lady guest at the right of host, or the oldest lady present, to be helped first, then the ladies in turn, including hostess, and the gentlemen guests after, the host last, of course. After the second plate is helped there should be no delay before eating.

Ledyard, the great traveler, says that among all nations women adorn themselves more than men, but that whenever found they are the same kind, civil remarks to a foolish notion of "independence" the business world has no room. She simply usurps the places which another and far more needly should occupy. Business is too practical a thing to be used as a play toy. The self-willed or strong headed girl who thinks she is oppressed at home will find "independence" farther away from her in a business career. Her "pin-money" she will find is made at a dear cost when she seeks to earn it in an office store or shop, says Edward W. Cook in the Home Journal.

The sole object of business is to make money. Methods of attaining that may differ, but the purpose is the same. Hence everything and everybody that comes within the attainment of that end is judged purely upon selfish lines and measured by cold and calculating standards. The sensitive, womanly nature never wants for respect, but it may at times be forgotten. The man in business is an entirely different animal!

from the same man met socially at the home of a friend, or when seen in his house. I do not say by this that a gentleman ever forgets the respect due to a woman in or out of business, but the manner in which a man at his ease and a man overcharged with business peremptory and warlike shows that respect may be widely different.

Story of a Necklace.

A curious and rather painful incident caused by the perfection of French imitation jewelry took place in Paris some years ago. An English lady, residing in France, married to a gentleman of great wealth, figured extensively at the most brilliant of the entertainments at the Tuilleries during the palmy days of the second empire. During her stay in the French capital, she caused her diamonds to be reset by a prominent Parisian jeweler, and had a number of her ornaments mounted as a necklace, thus forming one of exceptional beauty and value. Time passed on the empire fell to pieces and the English couple returned to take up their abode in their native land. Some years ago the lady dying bequeathed her diamond necklace to a favorite niece, who was far from wealthy. She told the young lady befray of the legacy that awaited her, added: "I do not want you to keep it, dear child, as you might wish to do out of respect to my memory, but dispose of it at once; it is worth at least $30,000, and its price will enable you to live in comfort."

When the young lady came into possession of her aunt's superb legacy she took it forthwith to one of the greatest jewelers of London. He examined it carefully and then asked her what she intended to do with it. "I want to sell it," was the answer. "I am told I can get $20,000 for it if some $3,000 is taken off the amount."
